

2019 Goals and Accomplishments

Based on each of SBTS' Convention approved Ministry Assignment, please describe accomplishments in the past year that create "value added" to the Cooperative Program dollars that SBTS receives.

I. Assist churches by programs of prebaccalaureate and baccalaureate theological education for ministers.

Boyce College, the undergraduate school of The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, continues to serve a growing student population of Southern Baptist college students. These students are receiving a Christian education of the highest quality and relevance. The aim of Boyce College is to raise up a new generation of leaders for faithful service in our churches and the mission field. Boyce attracts students who are already serious about their faith and challenges them to grow in their commitment to Christ and his church while they pursue undergraduate education. This depth of conviction has resulted in healthy enrollment as more and more students are drawn to Boyce's theological clarity and academic rigor. Given changes in program and student composition, the non-duplicating headcount at Boyce College decreased from 1,247 in 2016-17 to 1,199 in 2017-18, representing a 3.9% decrease.

The professors at Boyce college are not only recognized experts in their scholarly fields, but they also possess a clear commitment to shepherd and mentor their students. This is why Boyce students receive excellent instruction in the classroom, as well as a vibrant all-around student experience. Resident advisors work to cultivate biblical community within the residence halls. Students are exposed to a number of Southern Baptist pastors and leaders through weekly dorm meetings. Student groups, such as the student council and a new undergraduate academic journal, provide students with opportunities to develop leadership skills and experience that will serve them and our churches in the future. The honors program continues to grow and gives students in the program an opportunity for a deeper and more challenging academic experience. This program has proven effective in attracting some of the sharpest young minds in the SBC.

II. Assist churches by programs of masters' level theological education for ministers.

The central mission assignment for the seminaries is the education of pastors. That reaches back to our founding in 1859. The Master of Divinity program forms the core of Southern's efforts to provide master's level theological education. This is then supplemented through various master's level offerings, such as our Master of Arts in Biblical Counseling, Missiology, Theological Studies, and more. The Global Campus continues to expand as a vehicle for delivering theological education to master's students around the world. Students from all fifty states, the District of Columbia, and over twenty countries are enrolled in degree programs.

Overall, Southern Seminary had a total of 2,114 Master of Divinity students, which represents the largest group in the history of theological education. The School of Theology and Billy Graham School of Missions, Evangelism, and Ministry also continued to experience growth in their respective Master's programs. For the 2017-2018 academic year, the Master of Divinity program in the School of Theology continued as the largest program at the seminary with a total enrollment of 1,120 students. The Billy Graham School has a total enrollment of 994 students into their Master of Divinity program as well. Our faculty continues to grow as the need to serve our students increases. In addition to their classroom responsibilities, our faculty also continue to set the pace for serving in local SBC churches, speaking at conferences, and contributing to evangelical scholarship through writing books and delivering academic presentations.

III. Assist churches by programs of professional doctoral education for ministers.

Southern Seminary offers professional doctoral education through the Doctor of Ministry and the Doctor of Educational Ministry. For the 2017-18 academic year the total annual headcount for all Professional Doctoral Studies degree programs was 400. Specific attention was paid to prospective student service and recruitment efforts. Along with enrollment growth, professional doctoral studies leadership continues to evaluate program concentration offerings to ensure that we are providing major areas of study that align with an institutional commitment to the strongest academic training for those who serve as ministry practitioners. Completing a degree while in full-time ministry can be challenging. So, at Southern professional doctoral students enter on day one with a plan. Trained mentors guide students toward completion at a healthy pace, ensuring a greater number of students not only complete the program, but achieve the level of growth they desire. To help facilitate growth in preaching skill among students, the Broadus Society Fellowship is designed to expose students to seasoned preachers and authors, in order to provide a venue for mutual encouragement in homiletic practice.

Significant attention was also given to providing professional doctoral students with additional training opportunities aimed at increasing knowledge as it pertains to statistics in research. Our graduates continue to hold key leadership positions in our SBC local associations, state conventions, and national entities. They are also pastoring hundreds of established SBC churches and are planting Southern Baptist churches all over the world.

IV. Assist churches by programs of research doctoral education for ministers and theological educators.

Southern Seminary offers research doctoral education through the Doctor of Philosophy, Doctor of Education, Doctor of Missiology, and Master of Theology. These academic programs are among the most highly-respected in the nation and continue to produce well-trained pastor-scholars who serve in local church leadership, academics, and entity leadership. Research Doctoral Studies expanded their program offerings to include a fully modular Th.M. degree. This program allows students to receive a more intensive level of education in a range of subjects through week-long concentrated courses taken with a cohort.

For the 2017-18 academic year the total annual headcount for all Research Doctoral Studies degree programs was 440. The Research Doctoral Studies department maintains our institutional commitment to the strongest academic training available for every student. In 2017-2018 this included offering workshops on academic writing during the summer term. Additionally, to improve assessment of student writing more consistent rubrics were created in conjunction with the Associate Vice President of Academic Assessment. In 2018, twenty of our current students and graduates of our program presented papers at the prestigious national meeting and regional meetings of the Evangelical Theological Society and continue to shape the evangelical academic landscape. Several students presented at other national academic conferences.

The Research Doctoral Studies office expanded initiatives to promote a deeper sense of community among doctoral students by expanding the 1892 Club to include weekly meetings. To foster this same sense of community among our growing modular student body, we have begun posting the live recording of weekly 1892 club meetings online as well as host special chapel services for modular students during their time on campus each semester. The weekly 1892 Club continued to attract many students each week for fellowship and interaction with a visiting scholar. Southern is equipping many of the most gifted academic and church leaders within the Southern Baptist community. In a highly competitive academic job market, Southern doctoral graduates are continually sought after to serve in both traditionally academic and church-based posts. Amongst member schools of the Association of Theological Schools, Southern Seminary has the fourth largest number of graduates that currently hold teaching posts. In addition to this, many of our graduates hold administrative positions of leadership in institutions of higher learning throughout the country. As with our other programs, graduates are serving in positions of leadership throughout the SBC at the local, state and national levels. This is a great testimony to the strength of our program and the quality of our students.

What opportunities or challenges do you see on the horizon from 2018 and beyond that would necessitate changes, or new directions, in how SBTS is accomplishing each of its Ministry Assignments?

I. Assist churches by programs of prebaccalaureate and baccalaureate theological education for ministers.

In recent years, Boyce College has experienced unprecedented growth in terms of enrollment, educational excellence, and opportunities for students outside the classroom. The opportunity for 2019 primarily consists of building on the momentum already present to expand the reach of Boyce College among prospective students in order to maintain healthy growth. We believe that our current students are our best drivers for future growth. So Boyce aims to deliver excellent educational offerings, as well as extracurricular activities, with the goal of forming godly and well-equipped future Southern Baptist leaders. While we have enjoyed tremendous favor from the Lord, we are aware of the many ongoing challenges in higher education. As we maintain the SBC's commitment to abstain from government funding, we will need to carefully structure Southern Seminary and Boyce College in terms of personnel and facilities to make sure we are able to offer a program that is the highest in academic quality and competitively priced.

II. Assist churches by programs of masters' level theological education for ministers.

Southern Seminary is committed to offering the best quality theological education, while also working to develop students with spiritual depth and maturity. This means not only maintaining an excellent faculty, but providing an education that aims at the formation of ministry leaders who are intellectually capable, morally faithful, and walking closely with the Lord. In an effort to continually meet the needs and demands of on-campus education, Southern Seminary is introducing a new option for students to be taught and formed on campus. The Evening MDiv will allow students to take classes two nights a week for four years in order to complete their Master of Divinity. The demands of work, ministry, family, and school cause ever increasing difficulty for students to complete their degree on campus. We researched our current student population and found that two-thirds of our students are working 29 or more hours per week. With Southern Seminary's commitment to the Master of Divinity to train pastors for the gospel we believe that this new format of course offerings will allow students to meet the demands of the professional and personal lives while also being trained by the faculty of Southern for gospel ministry.

III. Assist churches by programs of professional doctoral education for ministers.

The professional doctoral studies team continuously strives for excellence and innovation in serving those seeking to develop their ministry competencies and skills. In order to ensure sustained excellence, at least two program areas will undergo evaluation with the intention of revising learning objectives and syllabi as needed. This will be done in collaboration with area faculty. Furthermore, the discipline of preaching will continue to be emphasized to all professional doctoral students through the Broadus Society Fellowship lectures and special chapel services in 2018-19. Also, we will continue to increase the quality of program orientation and introduction to doctoral writing as part of our efforts to ensure successful graduates. One of the challenges that most professional doctoral programs face is maintaining a high rate of degree completion, however Southern is experiencing significant success in this area. This is due, in part, because students are being assigned writing mentors and are helped with a project strategy immediately as part of their first week of classes. This helps students to focus on their project throughout their entire program. This focus allows the student to begin the writing process earlier and has been effective in helping them complete the degree program.

IV. Assist churches by programs of research doctoral education for ministers and theological educators.

While Southern's research doctoral program remains one of the strongest in Christian higher education, the aim is always to increase the quality and reach of the program. One area of opportunity will be to continue to develop partnerships related to international student teaching opportunities with the intention of student deployment. Currently, there is a growing need and opportunity for international theological education. Thousands of pastors around the world have no means to be trained. Southern Seminary will increase its efforts to provide opportunities for research doctoral students and graduates to train students in various parts of the world. In addition, we have developed the dissertation writing process by updating our dissertation proposal process and offering optional summer writing seminars. Also, an ongoing focus on developing the pedagogical skills of our students will be paired with a continued commitment to encourage research doctoral students to exercise their academic gifting in the service of local churches. The extensive pedagogical training that Southern Seminary students receive will allow them to become even more competitive in the current academic job market.
